

The Family, Vol. 1: March, 1920 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Family, Vol. 1: March, 1920 In the five districts in which there are Legal aid workers the district superintendents are responsible for the work. It is evident that a good many administrative problems will arise from this arrangement, such as the following: When Shall a case be turned over to an attorney? What shall then be done with the record? Shall a summary be written for the attorney or the complete record sent to the general office? Shall the general office keep a list of all defendants or should defendants be registered in the Social Service Registration Bureau? Only time can give the proper answer to these and many other similar problems. It is believed that ultimately the record system and the methods of work of the United Charities will be found the best methods in the legal aid work; but the mass of legal work is SO great that there has not been as yet any attempt to establish the United Charities record system in the Legal Aid Bureau. Some minor changes in the system in use in the Legal Aid Society, however, have been made. Since the amalgamation, all Jewish cases have been referred to the Bureau of Personal Service. Previously the Legal Aid Society kept the Jewish. Cases on which the Bureau of Personal Service was not registered.
